Course Description

Teams of student-managers compete in a complex international business simulation designed to allow them to demonstrate mastery of department-level, major, and discipline specific learning objectives. The teams operate a company in the international athletic footwear industry. Using a hands-on experiential approach, teams make strategic management, marketing, human resources, operations, facilities, finance, and corporate social responsibility decisions over ten fiscal years. Students are evaluated on their company's performance, but also on written individual and group analyses of the simulation and on a final comprehensive exam.

Attendance Policy

Students studying at The American University of Paris are expected to attend ALL scheduled classes. If a student misses more than three classes for any reason other than study trips (see below), the student will be asked to withdraw from the course or will receive a failing grade. If a student arrives at course meetings more than 10 minutes late it will be considered an absence. Unless otherwise indicated, attendance at the quizzes, final presentations, and final exam is mandatory. Due to the large number of nationalities and faiths represented at the University, religious and national holidays (other than those on the academic schedule) will not be excused. Academic Affairs will excuse an absence for students' participation in study trips related to their courses. IN ALL CASES OF MISSED COURSE MEETINGS, THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR COMMUNICATION WITH THE PROFESSOR AND FOR ARRANGING TO MAKE UP MISSED WORK RESTS SOLELY WITH THE STUDENT.
