Course Description

This course examines the major development of civilizations in East Asia from prehistory to the end of the sixteenth century. We will examine the histories of China, Korea, Japan, focusing primarily on China. You will also be asked to think comparatively, examining not only how the different countries and regions developed in East Asia, but also how East Asian developments compare with the “West.”

Course Learning Outcomes

Students will learn the broad historical context and narratives surrounding the civilizations of China, Japan, and Korea
Students will learn the main theoretical approaches to studying East Asia and in particular, recent historiographical changes and challenges to the region
Students will learn To analyze, critique and interpret both secondary and primary sources, through individual reading and writing and through group seminar discussion. In particular, we will learn how to approach sacred texts from an academic perspective students will improve at Analysis: students will learn to evaluate different arguments, facts and opinions, and to build and defend their own arguments. Every aspect of the course will reinforce and model good analytical skills.
students will improve at Research: students will learn how to find, evaluate and organize different sources of information. The research paper will particularly help students to find and use sources, as will our primary source analysis in class students will improve at Communication: students will learn how to communicate ideas more clearly and persuasively through writing and speaking. Written assignments and presentations formally give formal practice in communication skills, but everyday class participation – actively listening, thinking and responding – is also vital

Attendance Policy

Students studying at The American University of Paris are expected to attend ALL scheduled classes, and in case of absence, should contact their professors to explain the situation. It is the student’s responsibility to be aware of any specific attendance policy that a faculty member might have set in the course syllabus. The French Department, for example, has its own attendance policy, and students are responsible for compliance. Academic Affairs will excuse an absence for students’ participation in study trips related to their courses.

Attendance at all exams is mandatory.

IN ALL CASES OF MISSED COURSE MEETINGS, THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR COMMUNICATION WITH THE PROFESSOR, AND FOR ARRANGING TO MAKE UP MISSED WORK, RESTS SOLELY WITH THE STUDENT.

Whether an absence is excused or not is ALWAYS up to the discretion of the professor or the department. Unexcused absences can result in a low or failing participation grade. In the case of excessive absences, it is up to the professor or the department to decide if the student will receive an “F” for the course. An instructor may recommend that a student withdraw, if absences have made it impossible to continue in the course at a satisfactory level.

Students must be mindful of this policy when making their travel arrangements, and especially during the Drop/Add and Exam Periods.
Grading Policy

Participation (Attendance, Quizzes, Participation in Discussions) 25%

Reading Journal 25%

• For each class, choose one quote from the reading and respond with three to five sentences. These sentences should reflect your own thoughts and attention to elegant, concise prose. Some suggestions: Choose a quote (one to three sentences) that is surprising, thought-provoking, or that inspires comparisons with other countries or contemporary situations. Can you connect an idea to your own experiences, to a different time period, or to another work that we have read? What words, images, or examples does the writer use to convey his argument? At the beginning of each class, you will share your sentences with another person in class, and I may ask you to read your sentences aloud. Please keep your reading journal together in a notebook or folder. If you choose to handwrite, make sure the writing is legible. You will turn in the reading journal at the end of the semester.

Mid-Term Exam – 15%

Everything but Paper Assignment 15%

Final Exam 20%
